AHÎRS DECORATED WITH COWRIES FOR THE STICK DANCE AT DIWÂLI
Be aware of these fake images that are being spread to portray Ahirs in a negative way.
De-Bunked
Let's see the reality behind these images.

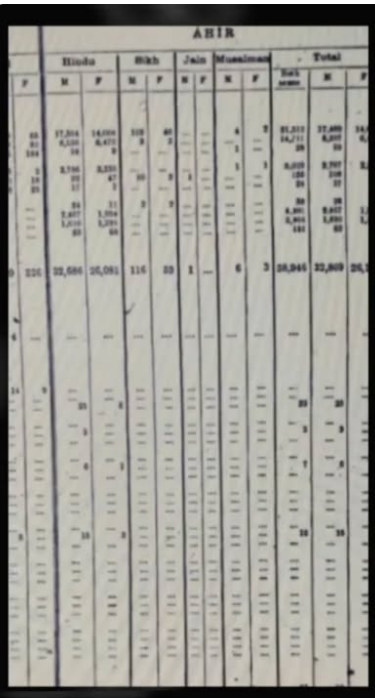
see this image and we can clearly see these people looks like muslim



In the undivided Punjab province, the population of Muslim Ahirs was 0.00015%. Basically, it is almost impossible to find Muslim Ahirs in the NCR.

(Sikh): 169 (116 males, 53 females)
Jain: 2 (1 male, 1 female)
Musalman (Muslim): 9 (6 males, 3 females)
Both (Mixed): 6 (3 males, 3 females)

All the information I gave is trustworthy. If anything is not clear, you can ask me in DM. The information I provided proves that there were no Muslim Ahirs in Delhi. Someone took a photo of a Muslim village and falsely labeled it as 'Ahir'

Bharia Tribal People

Actually, these people are from the Bharia tribe. This photo is one of the oldest ones available on the internet, and there it is mentioned as the Bharia tribe. Some people edited it, wrote 'Ahir' on it, and uploaded it on Wikipedia.

There is no strong historical or academic source that identifies this image as "Ahir."

The "Ahir" label seems to be a later edit, not original.The "Ahir" claim is very likely false or manipulated.

GAULI.

HINDOO LINGAYET.

The terms Gaolee and Aheer, are indiscriminately applied to the whole class of cow-herds, the greater number of whom trace their origin to Hindoostan. Three tribes only are from Telingana, and two call themselves Marhatta Gaolees. Almost all of them claim a high descent, and pretend to trace their pedigree, through petty Rajahs, to some of the gods.
Gawli was the title given to every lower caste tribe at the Kannada border and Telangana borders.

See how many types of Gawali are there. You should read the Bombay Gazetteer (1990), where it is clearly mentioned that Hanbar Gawli, Singaji Gawli, and Lingayat Gawli are different from Ahir Gawali. Except Ahir Gawli, all other 16 types of Gawalis are from Telangana, Kannada, and Andhra regions. But Ahir Gawli are in the majority in Bombay.

And it's all

1. General notice.

Ahīr,[1] Gaoli, Guāla, Golkar, Gaolān, Rāwat, Gahra, Mahākul.—The caste of cowherds, milkmen and cattle-breeders. In 1911 the Ahīrs numbered nearly 750,000 persons in the Central Provinces and Berār, being the sixth caste in point of numbers. This figure, however, excludes 150,000 Gowāris or graziers of the Marātha Districts, and if these were added the Ahīrs would out-number the Telis and rank fifth. The name Ahīr is derived from Abhīra, a tribe mentioned several times in inscriptions and the Hindu sacred books. Goāla, a cowherd, from Gopāla,[2] a protector of cows, is the Bengali name for the caste, and Gaoli, with the same signification, is now used in the Central Provinces to signify a dairyman as opposed to

Although there are 750,000 Ahirs in Madhya Pradesh according to the 1911 census, among those 750,000 Ahirs, 150,000 are non-Ahir Gawali, Holkar, Gaolan, Guar, and other cowherding castes. The Britishers did so in order to increase their social status, that's it, and they are present in Shahabad, Berar, and the Central region. He must be of that Guar-origin guy.
